coming generations might live free from contamination.
We are not alone something tells me, we are not alone.

And we are not afraid to make our feelings known.

To help our friends and neighbors to share in our concern. Won't you listen with your heart to this song of ours: We are not alone.

We’re crying, “Shut down the spread of atomic waste.” We’re crying,

“Shut down the threat of a nuclear haze!” We’re saying,

“No more can we believe that it’s safe To hide our heads in the sand, And pretend not to understand The poisoning of our land.”

Oh,

not alone. (We are not alone.) For the sake of our children, let us come to our senses. In the name of love, let us come to our senses. In the threat to life, nobody profits.
There isn't a moment to lose while we still have a chance to choose where our future goes.
Oh, We are not alone,
those of us who care that the coming generations might live free from contamination. We are not alone, something tells me we are not alone. (We are not alone.) Oh, we are not alone. (We are not alone.) We are not alone.
